Kiki Caruson is the assistant vice president for research, innovation, and global affairs for the University of South Florida (USF) system. In this capacity, she provides leadership regarding the university’s global engagement strategy, including education abroad activities, international research services, and partnership development. Caruson also manages the USF Global Discovery Hub and was the recipient of a Society for Research Administrators International’s Big Ideas grant, which funded the development of the Global Research Toolkit. Caruson received her bachelor’s degree from Smith College, her master’s degree from Johns Hopkins University, and her doctoral degree from the University of Georgia.

Joël A. Gallegos is assistant provost for international programs at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte (UNC Charlotte) where he oversees campuswide internationalization efforts, including education abroad and exchange, international student and scholar services, intensive English language, intercultural outreach, and on-campus internationalization. Previously, Gallegos served as director of education abroad at UNC Charlotte and director of study abroad and instructor of French at the University of Toledo. He holds an MA in French literature from Bowling Green State University. Gallegos serves on the Board of Directors of NAFSA, the Fund for Education Abroad, and the World Affairs Council of Charlotte.
Jane Gatewood serves as vice provost for global engagement at the University of Rochester where she leads and manages initiatives related to the university’s global activities. In this role, she oversees the institution’s international initiatives, focusing on the identification and development of partnership opportunities in research, teaching, and education. Her administrative experience includes developing complex bi- and multi-lateral international partnerships for research, educational mobility, and economic development across cultures and educational sectors. Gatewood holds a BA from Emory University and a PhD from the University of Georgia. She was a Fulbright-Nehru awardee and an Andrew W. Mellon Fellow at the School of Advanced Study at the University of London.

Savera Hayat-Dade is director of programs and international development at the University of Calgary. With more than 20 years of experience as an international development expert, Hayat-Dade has demonstrated expertise in the areas of evaluation, research, and capacity development. Working for USAID, International Youth Foundation (USA), World Bank, Social Research and Demonstration Corporation (Canada), Aga Khan University, University of Calgary, CANADEM, and Cowater International, she has conducted assessments and developed evaluation frameworks for security, youth employment, education, and governance programs. With an MSc in development management from London School of Economics and Political Science, Hayat-Dade’s research interests include social construction and global development.

Chad Hoseth is director of international initiatives at Colorado State University (CSU) where he is responsible for initiatives that help CSU achieve its strategic goals for comprehensive campus internationalization. His focus is on managing special partnerships, supporting faculty and their global interests, and fostering academic and cocurricular opportunities. Hoseth has an MA in international affairs from The George Washington University. He was a Fulbright Scholar on the International Education Administrators Program in Korea, and he is pursuing a PhD in higher education leadership from Colorado State University.
Elizabeth Langridge-Noti has recently returned from living, teaching, and excavating in Greece to take up the position of the director of faculty engagement, global affairs at the University of California, Davis. In her role, Langridge-Noti helps facilitate faculty activity and collaboration on global projects and partnerships, including currently supervising UC Davis’s international agreements process. She holds a BA in classical languages from University of California, Berkeley, and an MA and PhD in classical archaeology from Princeton University.

Paul Allen Miller is vice provost and Carolina Distinguished Professor at the University of South Carolina. He has held visiting appointments at the University of the Ruhr (Bochum), the University of Paris 13, and Beijing Language and Cultural University. Miller is currently director of Global Carolina. He holds a PhD in comparative literature from the University of Texas. He has edited 15 volumes of essay and published 80 articles.

Andrea Delgado Morrow is the director, international relations for the University of Calgary’s international office, where she and the team are responsible for institutional partnerships and agreements. She has more than 15 years of experience working in post-secondary education. This includes the University of Calgary and her roles as regional manager (Asia-Pacific) and associate faculty member at Royal Roads University and Mount Royal University (faculty of communication). Morrow has served on various committees throughout her career and currently leads the data management group for the Canadian Bureau for International Education’s international relations professional learning community. She holds an MA in intercultural and international communication from Royal Roads University.

Colleen Packer has worked in the field of international education for more than 20 years. She is currently the director, international learning programs at University of Calgary International. Packer provides leadership for the university’s education abroad programs, working with stakeholders across campus to support its international strategy. In addition to serving on various internal and external committees, Packer is the chair of the Canadian Bureau for International Education’s Education Abroad Professional Learning Community and is a frequent presenter at both national and international conferences. She has an MEd in adult learning from the University of Calgary.

Joanna Regulska is vice provost and associate chancellor of global affairs and professor of gender, sexuality, and women’s studies at the University of California, Davis. She has led transformative programs and partnerships for 30+ years. Two of the initiatives she currently leads are striving to provide all students with global learning experiences through Global Education for All, and strengthening research, education, and engagement efforts through Global Centers. A respected scholar, Regulska researches women’s political activism, grassroots mobilization, decentralization, democracy, and democratization. She received her master’s from University of Warsaw, Poland; doctorate from University of Colorado, Boulder; and doctor honoris causa from Tbilisi State University, Georgia.

Janaka Y. Ruwanpura is the vice provost international and a professor of engineering at the University of Calgary. Prior, he served as the director and Canada research chair in project management. Ruwanpura has been recognized for his outstanding academic, research, and administrative leadership with many local, national, and international awards. He led the University of Calgary to win five prestigious awards for internationalization and produced new models and tools to enhance internationalization. He is the current executive chair of the Commission on International Initiatives for the Association of Public and Land-grant Universities. He is a professional engineer and a professional quantity surveyor in Canada.

Jolynn Shoemaker is the director for global engagements at the University of California, Davis. Currently, she focuses on UC Davis engagement on the United Nations’s Sustainable Development Goals, the UC Davis Global Centers, and other strategic initiatives. Previously, Shoemaker worked on international peace and security issues in Washington D.C., with a focus on gender equality. She has worked with nongovernmental organizations and served in both the U.S. Department of State and the U.S. Department of Defense. She holds a JD and an MA (School of Foreign Service) from Georgetown University and a BA from University of California, San Diego.

Shehan Thampapillai is the deputy director of international business intelligence and strategic planning at Central Queensland University in Australia. He has more than 17 years of experience in the international education field and has held numerous senior positions at higher education institutions in Australia and the United Kingdom.

Kalpen Trivedi is associate provost for international programs at the University of Massachusetts Amherst. Responsible for strategic and operational oversight of the International Programs Office, he also provides leadership for campus internationalization. Trivedi has 16 years of experience in international education, with special interest in program design, travel health and safety, and global partnerships. A regular contributor and presenter in various forums, he is former vice-chair and steering committee member of the Overseas Security Advisory Council’s Academia Working Group, a member of the NAFSA Trainer Corps, and a member of The Guild of the College of Global Studies, Arcadia University.

Scott Vu is a partnerships officer on the Asia-Pacific team at the University of Calgary International. He helps facilitate international partnerships that accelerate the meaningful flow of knowledge, talent, and skills between Canada and the Asia-Pacific region. He holds a bachelor’s of arts (co-op) in international relations, specializing in the Asia-Pacific region, from the University of Calgary. Vu was a member of the team that received the Canadian Bureau for International Education’s Catalyst Award and the Association of International Education Administrators’s Innovation Award for developing of the International Partnerships Assessment and Rating Index.